

Ebony is fascinated with all sorts of colors, designs, and sizes of seashells scattered on the mixture of mud and sand. She spots a blue crab with beautiful, pink, long, hairy legs walking towards a hole in the sand. The crab starts walking backwards into the hole, then hides itself.

Ebony immediately falls in love with the tiny blue crab with strange, pink, tiny eyes popping out from its socket then closing right in. Her hairy, long, pink shell legs with pink sharp nails and two claws are too sensational for words. Ebony wonders where the crab has disappeared to so fast. It was in sight, then hurriedly out of sight in a secret hole in the mud and sand. Ebony wonders, "Where is the bottom of the crab hole?" She decides to convince the little crab to be called Princess of All the Perl so she would be the happiest lady in the entire ocean. Neither depth nor width, neither height nor stormy waves, would ever be too much to find her beautiful body made out of a mixed-colored shell. Perl is the little princess who does not have webbed feet and has captured the heart of Ebony.

Ebony just cannot separate her mind from her heart over the tiny crab. Ebony sneaks up behind the crab with her tail cocked high up, her left eye closed, and her right eye peeking deep down into the hole to find the crab to make friends.

Ebony waits patiently for the crab to come out of its hole. Soon, the crab approaches the exit, but cannot get out because Ebony's face is blocking the way. The crab decides to walk straight on top of Ebony's nose and holds onto her nose whiskers.

Ebony underestimates how strong her breaths of air are. She exhales one deep breath, blowing the crab up in the air. Landing on its back, the little crab laughs heartily with all eight legs wriggling uncontrollably. Ebony shouts, "How come you have so many legs and claws, for crying out loud? I only have two hands. Are your
